Except Mrs. Tsilka, the friends of Miss Stone were allowed to proceed on their way. Later a demand was made for $112,500 ransom for the release of the two women.

The kidnaping of Miss Stone became a matter of international importance.

a matter of international importance, and her release was worked for by the Government here with energy. Spencer Eddy, first secretary of the legation at Constantinople, who had charge of the negotiations to secure her release, declared on February 23, 1902, that the capture of Miss Stone was a political matter, and that all the people of Macedonia were in sympathy with it, for they believed that it was a step toward freeing Macedonia from Turkish rule.

Negotiations for Miss Stone's release without the payment of a ransom were futile. She and Mrs. Tsilka were final-ly, on February 23, 1902, released after the brigand had received $65,000 ransom

Police Away, Amateur Gamblers Fill Streets

NEW YORK, April 25.-One of the activity in the Wall Street district has been observed in the return to New street of the coterie of amateur gamb lers who were actively engaged in conducting both "sweat" and "crap" games. These games were extensively patronized by the messenger boys and stock runners, who, since the boom in the market has started, have made all kinds of more and have become implied with market has started, have made all kinds of money and have become imbued with the present intense speculative fever in Wall Street.

Several of these games were being carried on in the block between Exchange place and Beaver street, formerly occupied by the "gutter market," which held forth there during the time that the Stock Exchange was closed that the Stock Exchange was closed down.

The stakes played for were not confined to dimes and nickels, but frequently half dollars, dollar bills and even those of larger denominations were wagered on the turn of the dice.

The police were on their annual parade and lookouts watched for any chance bluecoat.

Actor on Broadway Clad in Nightshirt

NEW YORK, April 25 .- The spectacle of a corpulent man, puffing indignantly, and clad only in a nightshirt, being shoved about by a jeering crowd on Broadway at Forty-eighth street in the small hours of the morning, startled Patrolman McVey.

Hastily dispersing the crowd of late diners, the patrolman walked the man to the West Forty-seventh street police station. There he said he was Bartley McCullem, a moving picture actor. He explained he had been dumped into a tub of cold water during an initiation into a social club earlier in the evening, and that later he dreamed the plungs was going to be reveated. plungs was going to be repeated, so in his sleep he fied from his bed to Broadway.

After McCullem had quieted he was sent home in a taxicab.

Little Farmer In Your Spare Time GROW YOUR OWN FRUIT & VIEGETABLES RAISE CHICKENS AND OTHER PRODUCE FOR THE TABLE

Cabin John Park

The Sedative for Tired Nerves is Little Farms

NOT AWAY OFF "Somewhere," only 45 minutes from the White House.

LITTLE FARMS at CABIN JOHN PARK are in size from one-third of an acre up to eight acres in area. Of course, you can't make your entire living on the one-third-of-an-acre farm, and you don't need to; nor need you give up your city job, for CABIN JOHN PARK is only 45 minutes from the business center of Washington; commutation, $3.50 a month. That is the advantage of owning a LITTLE FARM at CABIN JOHN PARK; and incidentally you become a voting citizen if you live there.

You can enjoy pleasure—with boating and fishing—have up-to-date conveniences and still be far away from lonely isolation. And right near Washington city, you can have your work and your country

Your city job will make you a living, and your country job—close to nature—will keep you living full of health and vitality; all the while, too, the big city will be growing toward and around you. LITTLE FARMS at CABIN JOHN PARK are an antidote for many of the ills of modern city life. I wager that there are numerous Washingtonians whose feet haven't touched anything but floor, sidewalk, or pavement for months; like a horse who has traveled only on stone streets, these city folks are stoved up and cannot imagine what is wrong with them. They need to get their feet on the soil. Yes, "I intend to go back on the land some day," you say, "but the country is so far away, and I enjoy city pleasures and conveniences, and besides my work is in the city." This is just where LITTLE FARMS at CABIN JOHN PARK solve the universal land-longing problem. These LITTLE FARMS are not away off somewhere in beautiful nowhere, but are right near the Capital of the greatest nation on earth. WHOLESOME environment is found at CABIN JOHN PARK, and this makes for good citizenship. It is in such a place I would ask you to make your home. In years to come you will see what I am looking at now. It may then be too late. These LITTLE FARMS harmonize a natural craving for pure air and larger grounds, for shrubbery and gardens—where your children can romp over lawns and among the trees; where the winds of the wide world blow about them, imparting to their little bodies health and vigor. Do you remember the time when you were a boy? You can recall yet the feel of the earth oozing up between your bare toes, the tickle of the green velvety grass in the springtime on the soles of your bare feet. Oh, My! What a time!

The renter moving from flat to flat, or house to house each year—what about the home memories of YOUR boys and girls? None like that for them. You cannot bestow home memories on your children by moving to some new and strange place each year. Real home memories are founded on the permanancy and quality of the home. On

April 29, 30 and May 1

You will have the opportunity of starting a sensible home for yourself and family. No alarm clock will ring when Time strikes the hour of your opportunity. You, like all other successful home getters, will have to seek that which you want. Things easily acquired are valueless. The THING to DO on reading this advertisement is for you to tuck away in a corner of your memory the day and the hour of this sale. Mark your calendar with a ring around the dates.

ON THE DAYS NAMED I shall sell real home sites to the highest bidder, regardless of price or value, and without reserve, and in this case to WHITE PEOPLE only.
